FASHION CAUSES TRIBAL ROUBLES

Indian Women Envious of "White Lady Bird's" Apparel.

MEN ARE TAKING SIDES.

Squaws Rivalry Engaged in Preparing Handsome Gowns for the Opening of the Village To-Day.

A keen rivalry in fashion among the Indian women encamped at the World's Fair threatens to precipitate a social war among the various Indian tribes on the Exposition reservation.

The cause of the discontent among the women has been inspired by White Lady Bird, wife of the Sioux chieftain, who has set the standard of fashion by her handsome and valuable gowns. Beside the chief's wife there are other members of the different tribes who are equally well justified in claiming to be called "White Lady Birds."

But star of all the unique gowns of Indian elegance is White Lady Bird's, which she intends to wear on the occasion of the Indian Village dedication to-morrow.

So bitter has become the feeling of rivalry among the women because of the dress question that the men are taking a hand in the discussion, which promises to result in a social feud among the twenty-one tribes at the Fair.

No such rivalry ever chronicled among the queens of fashion's smartest set can be traced to the time of the great social houses at the Exposition grounds.

No season's belle ever gave such lavish attention to her particular gown as the Indian women are devoting to their gowns for the coming social event.

Arguing on the theory that it is an "ill wind that blows nobody good," the prediction has been made that the outcome of the spirited contest for social rank of fashion's supremacy will work a revolution in dress reform among the Indian women on the reservation.

CLIMAX REACHED.

The climax in the situation was reached yesterday when the women got together and told each other what they were going to wear at Wednesday's society event.

The trouble was brought on by the wife of the Pima chieftain wanting to borrow a paper pattern, like her sister-in-law, in suggesting the loan of one of White Lady Bird's choice necklaces made of beaver teeth and turquoise stones. Woneka, wife of the Pima chief, who has only just arrived from Arizona, drew a mental comparison of the Sioux chiefs and dress accessories of the Sioux chiefs with her own cotton shirt and plain calico bodice, and her brown feet compared to the other one's beautifully embroidered head moccasins.

She also viewed with a feminine longing for the pretty articles of dress. White Lady Bird's dress was so handsome and begged to be allowed to wear one of them for the coming social occasion.

But White Lady Bird did not see it that way. Woneka was angry—very angry. She communicated her disapproval of White Lady Bird's selfishness to her chief and he, for the first time in his life, acted with his squaw on the important question of dress.

After consideration of the matter he decided upon a plan of social ostracism for the Sioux. Just how this will take has not yet been decided, but it is likely that the chief and his wife will pitch their camp at the two opposite corners of the reservation will visit each other seldom, if at all, during the summer months.

Elaborate preparations have been made for the coming social event. All of the different tribes will receive visitors at their homes throughout the day. The formal reception will be given by the big general social event ever participated in by tribes collected from every corner of the reservation. The event exists; from the aboriginal Patagonians to the industrious tribes of red men of the Southwest.

GUESTS WILL BE DIRECTED TO ECONOMICAL HOTELS.

Bureaus Are Calling Public Attention to Accommodations for World's Fair Visitors.

The Executive Committee of the Business Men's League yesterday took vigorous steps to bring to the attention of the public the facilities of several bureaus which are established to direct visitors to economical hotels and boarding houses.

The meeting was attended by President C. P. Walbridge, Julius C. Birge, James F. Coyle, Edward Devoy, W. J. Kinnella, Daniel Deronda, John E. Picher, John Schaefer, George A. Roth, H. W. Wernse, J. J. Wertheimer, O. L. Whitelaw and Secretary W. F. Saunders.

Mr. Wernse is the president of the Merchants' Exchange and Mr. Coyle is president of the Interstate Merchants' Association. It transpired during the discussion that the bureaus, which are being operated at a considerable expense by the various organizations, have on their lists over a hundred good hotels, boarding houses, all of which have unused capacity.

Comfortable lodging without board can be had in many of these houses at low rates, as low as $1.00 a day, and some as low as 75 cents and 50 cents.

Short talks were made by Paul Pierce, Superintendent of Pure Food; J. E. Crum, Superintendent of Installation; and Professor Taft of the jury of awards of fruits.

TEXAS PAVILION SCENE OF GAYETY

Prominent Society Women Receive at Piano Recital Given by Wilbur McDonald of Dallas.

The Texas Pavilion at the World's Fair was crowded with guests yesterday afternoon when Wilbur McDonald of Dallas gave a piano recital, assisted by Mrs. L. L. Jester of Tyler, whose voice has won for her more than a State-wide reputation.

The Texas Commission has assigned to each of the twenty women commissioners a week during the Exposition, in which to act as hostess, and each hostess.

A musical program will be rendered on the upper porch of the Kinkaid Garden while tea is being served in the basement. Refreshments will also be served in the Art Bazaar building in the garden. Hokkai Takashima, a well-known Japanese artist, will draw sketches of birds and flowers, which will be given to the guests as souvenirs.

The receiving party will include Mr. Kokoro Takahira, Japanese Minister to the United States; Baron M. Kikuchi, Mayor and Mrs. Rola Welby, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Nugent, Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. Hirschberg, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. John Schreiers, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. R. Diaz-Alberich, Mr. and Mrs. McArthur, Mrs. Messrs. Halme Ota, Haruki Yamawaki, Masanao Hanabara, Hiroshi Shigeki, (Shirato) Teru and Naoko Kanaoka, who are members of the Japanese Imperial Commission.

Small trees, many centuries old, have been imported from Japan and are scattered over the garden. The materials out of which the pavilion was constructed were also brought from Japan, and the building was modeled after Balmo's Gaten of 600 years ago.

Admission to the reception to-day will be exclusively by card.

CEYLON EXHIBIT INCLUDES SKULL OF AN ELEPHANT.

Array of Oyster Shells is Comprehensive, While Ornamental Timbers Are Features of Display.

Included in the Ceylon exhibits in the Forestry, Fish and Game building, which have just been completed are a representative group of pearl oyster shells, deer and monkey skins, the skull and tusk of an elephant, a trophy of Ceylon leopards, and a series of photographs portraying an elephant hunt.

The exhibit of pearl oyster shells is comprehensive, showing the various sizes, a mother-of-pearl lining, and also some that are known as "need" pearls.

The forestry exhibit of Ceylon shows the woods most useful to the people of that island. The principal exhibit consists of thirty-six species of trees, some of which are building timbers. These are set longitudinally in a log of sawtimber tree, which rests on ebony pedestals.

The Ceylon exhibits have all been installed under the direction of Huyshe Elliot, Assistant Commissioner.

TO SELL BELGIAN PAVILION.

Miss Gould to Receive the Social Economy Exhibit.

The National Pavilion of Belgium is to be sold in the United States after the Fair. This was decided on because the Belgian Commission found out there would not be time enough to take it to pieces and send it to the Universal Exposition of 1905, Belgium, next year, as was intended originally.

The price asked is $20,000, and Gustave Charlaton, who built it, states that the pavilion cost about $120,000. It could be used as a museum, a factory, a school station, a greenhouse, a circus or for exhibition purposes.

It can be removed easily and re-erected on solid concrete foundations; and even if the pavilion stays in place, it is a masterpiece of architecture. The architect of the building, Saintenoy, architect of the building, declared that it would be very easy to make, without touching the structure, a concrete foundation. All the framing of the building is of steel.

Miss Gould is to receive as a gift all the exhibits of the social economy section of the Belgium Pavilion. Among them are: a large collection of statistics concerning children, industrial, professional, manual labor and housekeeping schools; savings institutions; low-cost housing; industrial societies, etc. All these exhibits will find a place in Miss Gould's social economy museum in Newburgh, N. Y.

All the anthropology section of the Belgium Pavilion will be given to the Washington University. It includes a large collection of prehistoric human skulls, eighteen in number.

Many Keys Required to Lock Cases Containing Valuable Exhibits.

Hundreds of Chinese coins, many of them centuries old, form part of the Chinese exhibit in the Palace of Liberal Arts. All have the distinguishing mark of a square hole, but aside from this common feature, the specimens shown differ widely.

Bronze, brass, copper and silver coins are all shown, and many odd shapes. Some of the coins have the shape of a blade of a razor, and still others are perforated with holes in various interesting patterns. All of the coins are catalogued.
